VII. Certain defects in the international application

The following defects in the form or contents of the international application have been noted:

Claims 15-182 are objected to under PCT Rule 66.2(a)(iii) as containing the following defect(s) in the form or contents thereof: claim numbers 15 and 16 are used twice in succession, which leads to the numbering of the rest of the claims to be improper.

(To be used when the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient)

V. 2. Citations and Explanations:

Claims 1-101 and 103-110 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest an expansion device with a vibratory device and an actuator coupled to the expansion cone for displacing the expansion device, as is currently claimed.

Claim 102 meets the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest a means for radially expanding a tubular with a means for reducing the required radial expansion forces, as is currently claimed.

Claims 111-118 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest an expansion device with a vibratory device wherein the expansion device has one or more external arcuate spherical, elliptical, hyperbolic, or faceted surfaces, as is currently claimed.

Claims 119, 120, 135, 138, 139, 178, 180, and 182 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest an expansion device with a vibratory device wherein the expansion device is a rotary expansion device and vibratory energy is injected into the expansion device to impart rotation to the expansion device, as is currently claimed.

Claims 121-124, 136, 137, and 149-151 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest an expansion device with a vibratory device wherein the vibratory device is located within an expanded portion of the tubular to inject vibratory energy from a location within the expansion device, as is currently claimed.

Claims 125, 126, 152, and 153 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest an expansion device with a vibratory device wherein there are a plurality of vibratory devices for injecting vibratory energy from a plurality of locations, as is currently claimed.

Claims 127-130, 154-156, 162-164, 170-172, 177, 179, and 181 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest an expansion device with a vibratory device wherein the vibratory energy has a frequency distribution having a plurality of center frequencies and the vibratory energy is in a plurality of planes, as is currently claimed.

Claims 131-134, 157, 158, 165, 166, 173, and 174 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest an expansion device with a vibratory device wherein the plane of vibratory energy is variable or wherein the center of frequency is about 40Hz, as is currently claimed.

Claims 140-143 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest a method and system for radially expanding and plastically deforming a tubular wherein the plasticity and formability of the tubular is increased prior to expansion, as is currently claimed.

Claims 144-147 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest a method and system for radially expanding and plastically deforming a tubular by injecting vibratory energy and, during expansion, incrementing at least one of the plane, center frequency, and amplitude for the injected vibratory energy and monitoring the amount of energy required, as is currently claimed.

Claim 148 meets the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest an expansion device with a vibratory device wherein the expansion device has a locking device coupled to an actuator for fixing the position of the tubular relative to the expansion device, as is currently claimed.

Claims 159, 160, 167, 168, 175, and 176 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest an expansion device with a vibratory device wherein the expandable tubular is a wellbore casing or a pipeline, as is currently claimed.

Supplemental Box

(To be used when the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient)

Claims 161 and 169 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(3), because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest radially expanding a tubular with an expansion device and a vibratory device wherein the vibratory energy is injected by injecting fluidic materials into the tubular, as is currently claimed.

Claims 1-182 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(4), and thus have industrial applicability because the subject matter claimed can be made or used in industry.
